Passage of an Important Bill by the United States Senate.

The Senate has passed, by a vote of 33 to 11, what is considered by every one to be the most important measure brought before Congress since the passage of the so-called vindication. The following is the 1st, 21

SEC. 2. There shall be no discrimination in the civil rights or immunities among the inhabitants of any State or Territory of the without regard to any previous condition of slavery, or involuntary servitude, except as punishment for crime, whereof the party shall be duly convicted, shall have the same right to make and enforce contracts, to sue purchase, lease or sell, hold and convey real and personal properties; to the full and equal benefits of all laws and proceedings for the security of person and property; and shall be subject to fike punishments, pains and raguayans, while the latter, though falling ory is further demonstrated by the remark-measured music, which I considered as penalties, and to none other, any law, statute, ordinance, regulation, or pustom, to the Sec. 10. That it shall be lawful for the President of the United States, or such person as he may empower for that purpose, to employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States, or of the militia, as shall be necessary to prevent the violation and the due enforcing of this act. The last section was strenuously opposed by Cowan and Hendricks, but was adopted by 33 to 11, and is a copy of a section of the bill passed during the democratic administration of Van Buren.

The late Judge Collamer used to give the following order of business in the United States Senate: "First," said the Judge, have a prayer by the chaplain; next the reading of the journal; then Wilson introduces a bill; then Sumner makes a classical speech; then Fessenden gets mad, and then the Senate adjourns. This order has undergone very little change since Judge Collamer's death. First prayer; next reading the journal; then Wilson introduces a bill then Sumner makes un assault on the President; then somebody proposes to amend the Constitution, and then the Senate adjourns.
